BELIEVE WRECKAGE THAT OF PORTLAND YACHT

Wreckage found floating off of Se-ruin last Friday by the Beals, Me., freighter Lizzie J. Clark, Capt. John Barry, which is discharging a cargo of salt fish at the P. J. O'Brien wharf is believed to have come from a yacht of the Portland yacht club, identification having been made by means of the code flag recovered with the spar, spreaders and other parts of the craft picked up.

It is reported that the craft, in a disabled condition, was picked up off of the Maine coast by a Gloucester fishing schooner and towed to Booth-bay, Me.

WHALE FOULS OTTER TRAWL

A whale ran afoul the Boston fishing steamer Whitecap on Georges, the crew reported on arrival at the Fish Pier, Boston yesterday, and when the "fuss" was over the whale departed apparently unhurt, leaving the White-cap with a damaged otter trawl that necessitated suspension of fishing operations a bit ahead of schedule. Coming to the surface in the trawl, the whale made a mighty struggle and freed itself from the entanglement. It then circled the trawler three times, spouting the while, something that was interpreted by the fishermen as a gesture of victory, and then disappeared.

BOSTON FLEET SMALLER TODAY

FOURTEEN VESSELS THERE HAVE MOSTLY GROUND FISH—PRI-CES LITTLE STRONGER.

A fleet of 14 vessels furnished the

T WHARF COMPANY IN BANKRUPTCY

The T Wharf Fish Company, wholesale fish dealers of Atlantic avenue, filed a voluntary bankruptcy petition in the federal court yesterday, declaring its liabilities to be $25,942, and assets $8103.

The T Wharf Fish Company, located at 150 Atlantic avenue, near the celebrated old pier which formerly housed Boston's fish industry, was established about 10 years ago, and was one of the largest fish concerns doing business on the city side of the harbor.

Charles E. Burns, of South Duxbury, is listed as president.

N. F. Herring News.

Herring are plentiful in Newfoundland this season, according to the crew of the Newfoundland schooner Frank Baxter, a former Lunenburg fishing schooner, which reported at Halifax, on Monday last, from Twillingate, N. F., with a cargo of 1400 barrels of herring, consigned to H. R. Silver and Company. This is the second large cargo of herring to arrive from Newfoundland during the past two weeks, and it is reported that the schooner Dazzle, Capt. Vaters, is also bound to Halifax, with a similar cargo.

CANADIAN CRAFT ARRIVES FROM PROVINCES WITH SALT FISH.

There were three seiners here this morning, two of them having small fares of large mackerel and the other a few blinks. Fog last night prevented fishing, and many of the fleet remained in port until this morning.

The British schooner Seretha with 115,000 pounds of salt fish came in during the night from Nova Scotia for the Frank C. Pearce Company, and the halibuter Natalie Hammond brought some salt and fresh fish from Boston for the Booth Fisheries Company. There were no other arrivals.

Quiet Day at N. Y.

There were no arrivals and no groundfish in the New York market this morning.

N. S. Dried Codfish.

There is not much news to relate about the dried fish markets at the present time; there scarcely ever is in the month of July. The news from Porto Rico, the market in which we are most interested, is that business continues dull, and that sales are giving returns to shippers here of only $7.57 per quintal. Such returns, we may say, are not encouraging to those shippers who for the catch of the second spring trip of the Lunenburg fleet, paid $7.50 per quintal for large, and $7 for small. Incidentally, for the catch of the same trip last year, they paid only $6.75 for both large and small fish, and the quantity purchased was practically the same as this year.

There is no news from the Lunenburg fleet now on its summer trip; in fact, the only news we have of the summer codfishery is from the North Shore of the St. Lawrence, and it is discouraging, because it tells of the destruction inflicted on the fishery there by schools of white porpoises. The situation as reported is very distressing to the local fishermen, and furthermore it threatens to create a shortage in the supply of a particular class of dried fish of which in recent years there has scarcely been enough for world market needs.

Early news from Labrador reported good fishing, but nothing has been heard here from that district of late.
Newfoundland's summer fishing, according to late reports, has been disappointing.

It is yet too early to attempt an estimate of what the world catch of codfish for 1929 will be, or as to the prospective tendency of market prices.
Iceland has had a very large catch this season, and so, too, has Norway. For a time, Iceland fish were selling at very low prices, but recently they have slightly stiffened though still very low.
Iceland, as our readers know, has in recent years become a very serious menace to other countries engaged in the industry of cod fishing, and there is reason to fear that she is likely to become a still greater menace in the future. Her competition with us is more direct, but she has been cutting into the trade of Newfoundland in certain European markets which the latter had more or less considered as her own for years.—Maritime Merchant.
